

BRIXXTM Futures – How to Trade

What are BRIXX Commercial Real Estate Indexes?

BRIXXTM Commercial Real Estate (CRE) Indexes are the first family of real estate indexes to incorporate commodity pricing to overcome the limitations of appraisal lag, self-reporting, and leverage disparities to establish an accurate view of the real estate market. The performance of the BRIXX Indexes is calculated on an unlevered basis using publicly traded equities, resulting in a 12-month leading correlation to established private market real estate indexes that rely on survey, transaction, or appraisal data.

The BRIXX Indexes measure real-time changes in commercial real estate valuations across various sectors of the market to support hedging, benchmarking, and portfolio allocation strategies for both public and private real estate investors. The indexes use data that is updated through continuous real-time changes in equity share prices, 10Q, 10K, and interim period 8K filings.

BRIXX offers trading across four sectors (retail, office, hospitality and residential). The BRIXX Composite Index includes all four sectors.
